

RPA Ethics Internship Announcement 2021
4.23.21

The Register is pleased to announce its fifth annual call for applications for our Summer Ethics Internship!

Over the past four years, we have been heartened by how much the internship has grown and what our interns have accomplished. The Archaeological Ethics Database (<http://www.archaeologicaethics.org>), the online digital database co-sponsored by the Register and CifA, now lists over 800 resources on archaeological ethics.

We recognize that this is a precarious and difficult time for many graduate students and that a lot of summer fieldwork continues to have been put on hold. To try to alleviate some of the financial stress, we are offering two paid intern positions for Summer 2021.

We are seeking two graduate students who have an interest in archaeological ethics; are self-directed; are available to work approximately 10 hours a week; have access to the internet and institutional databases; and can work remotely from their home. Familiarity with WordPress or database management is preferred, but not required.

The interns will work together and with the Register's Ethics Committee on updating and maintaining the database, compiling ethical scenarios for student Ethics Bowls, developing strategies to promote the database for public, online, and academic education, and other tasks related to the Register's various ethics initiatives.

Both positions will run from June through August 2021. The Ethics Interns will each receive a stipend of $1,500 USD.

Students who would like to apply as an Ethics Intern should send the following to the RPA Ethics Committee at ethics@rpanet.org:

- A one-page cover letter on why you should be selected
- A curriculum vitae
- The name and institution of your major professor or faculty advisor

Please group application materials into a single PDF file.

A final step in the hiring process will be for candidates to arrange reference calls. If asked for an interview, you will be asked to set up a call between the committee and one of your referees.

The deadline for applications is Monday, May 17, 2021. Please direct all questions to Kenneth Aitchison at ethics@rpanet.org.
